My Website Information and Credentials

Have you ever needed to renew your domain name only to forget who your registrar is?

How about find out your website was down only to realize you had no idea who to contact to get it back online?

Have you ever hired someone to work on your website only to have the project delayed because you needed to hunt down all your usernames and passwords?

THIS PDF IS YOUR SOLUTION!

I'm stoked to share this free resource with you: it's an interactive PDF where you can record all your website-related information and save it in one place.

I know, a bit nerdy, eh? But also super handy.

Just save this PDF on your computer, and then fill out the interactive fields. That's it. Next time you're in panic mode you can relax knowing that you planned ahead.

PS: Don't share this file with anyone; keep it in a safe, secure place. If you must share with a webdesigner/etc, do so safely. Like through a service that uses a two step verification and SSL encryption like Amazon Web Service, Dropbox, or Google Drive.

BONUS POINTS: After you record all your information in the document, make reminders for yourself in your calendar app for the renew dates of your domain name, hosting account, and any other service related to your online presence that needs to be renewed!

About Jamie Leigh

Here's the thing not many folks know:

A DYNAMIC WEBSITE IS BOTH A WORK OF ART AND A FEAT OF TECHNOLOGY

Which happens to be something I totally dig.

On one hand, I'm a heart-centred creative. I've got a degree in visual anthropology and I'm fascinated by the unique ways we express ourselves and our worldviews. I believe creativity is at the core of what makes us human—and I love humans.

But on the other, I'm all tech. In a past life, I was a network administrator. Industrial-strength passwords and redundant backups give me goosebumps.

I used to think those two sides of my identity were in conflict with each other. Crazy, right? Now I know the truth: like Marty and Doc, they're way stronger together.

So I create WordPress websites that are both smart AND beautiful.

Just like you.
